On Monday, February 20, 2012, at 10:00 AM, a free workshop will be held at the Unitarian Universalist Society in Classroom #1. The purpose of this workshop will be to determine the type of computer classes (areas of interest) for both the U.U. and the General Public are interested in attending. Nina is a state certified teacher and has taught for the State, County and City. Most recently she taught at the Casements until the building was closed for renovations. Her classes range from Introduction to Computers, to Internet & Email, Face Book, PC Maintenance / Security and the current rage "STREAMING". Streaming was the downfall for the DVD rental business, as it allows individuals extreme selectivity, unlimited use, it is inexpensive and convenient. Save your money and learn to Stream. See your friends and relatives live when you learn to Skype.

When you are comfortable surfing the internet, the computer becomes fun and everyone who attends her "Introduction to Computers" will know how. The computer is no longer a luxury, but a necessity. In fact, many state, county and city jobs require internet applications; while social services from food stamps to unemployment are headed in that direction as well.

Classes currently meet on Mondays and Wednesdays, starting at 9:30 AM. Four two hour class generally run $65.00, you may bring your laptop or rent one from Nina. There are still two openings in her "Digital Camera Download, Organize and Print" class, starting February, 6th.
